Enrollment Process and Admission Requirements

The enrollment process for City University of New York continuing education programs is straightforward and designed to facilitate easy access for prospective students. Admission requirements vary depending on the program type and academic level.

Application Procedures

Applicants typically need to complete an online or paper application form specific to continuing education. Some programs may require additional documentation such as transcripts, resumes, or letters of recommendation. There is generally no need for standardized test scores unless entering credit-bearing preparatory courses.

Eligibility Criteria

Eligibility depends on the program; many courses are open to adult learners with a high school diploma or equivalent. Some professional certificate programs may require relevant work experience or prerequisite knowledge. The admissions team at CUNY provides guidance to help applicants select appropriate courses.

Registration and Payment

Once accepted, students register for courses through the CUNY continuing education portal or campus offices. Payment plans and financial aid options may be available to ease the financial burden. Early registration is encouraged due to limited class sizes in high-demand courses.
