Overview of CSUF Title IX Training

The CSUF Title IX training is designed to educate the university community about the legal requirements and institutional policies surrounding sex discrimination, sexual harassment, and sexual violence. Title IX is a federal civil rights law that prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in any education program or activity receiving federal financial assistance. CSUF's training ensures that all members of the campus understand their rights and responsibilities under this law.

Completion of the Title IX training is mandatory for all students, faculty, and staff. It is typically offered through an online platform that allows participants to learn at their own pace while ensuring comprehension through quizzes and assessments. The training is updated regularly to reflect changes in federal regulations and institutional policy adjustments.

Purpose and Importance

The primary purpose of CSUF Title IX training is to prevent incidents of sexual harassment and discrimination by promoting awareness and understanding. The training equips individuals with the knowledge to identify inappropriate conduct and understand the procedures for reporting and addressing complaints. This proactive approach supports a campus culture that values respect, equity, and safety.

Who Must Complete the Training?

All students enrolling at CSUF, new hires, and existing staff and faculty members are required to complete Title IX training. The university often sets deadlines for completion to ensure compliance and maintain a safe educational environment. Additionally, some departments may require refresher training annually or biannually.

Key Topics Covered in the Training
