The criteria for receiving a Victoria Cross are stringent, requiring conspicuous gallantry or daring actions in the presence of the enemy. Since its inception, the VC has been awarded sparingly, with fewer than 1,400 recipients worldwide.

History and Establishment

The Victoria Cross was instituted during the Crimean War to acknowledge the courage of soldiers regardless of rank. It was designed to be an egalitarian award, given for merit rather than social status. The medal is made from bronze traditionally believed to be from Russian cannon captured at Sevastopol, symbolizing the valor of those who receive it.

Criteria for Award
