Understanding the Myers-Briggs Personality Assessment

The Myers-Briggs Personality Assessment is based on the psychological typology developed by Carl Jung and later expanded by Isabel Briggs Myers and Katharine Cook Briggs. It assesses personality across four dichotomies: Extraversion (E) vs. Introversion (I), Sensing (S) vs. Intuition (N), Thinking (T) vs. Feeling (F), and Judging (J) vs. Perceiving (P). The combination of these preferences forms 16 unique personality types, each with distinct traits and behavioral tendencies.

Historical Background

The foundation of the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator was laid in the early 20th century when Jung's theories on personality types gained attention. Isabel Briggs Myers and her mother Katharine Cook Briggs developed the MBTI during World War II to help people understand themselves and others better, facilitating improved workplace harmony and personal relationships.

Structure of the MBTI

The MBTI consists of a series of questions designed to reveal an individual's preferences in how they perceive the world and make decisions. The assessment results in a four-letter code representing the dominant traits, such as INFJ, ESTP, or INFP. Each type provides a comprehensive profile that describes common strengths, weaknesses, communication styles, and potential career paths.
