Analyzing Feedback and Refining Guesses

Careful interpretation of the color-coded feedback is essential. For example, if a letter turns green, it should be retained in the same position in future guesses. Yellow letters must be included but repositioned, and gray letters should be avoided unless the puzzle's rules allow multiple occurrences of a letter. Systematic elimination based on feedback accelerates the solving process for wordle.march 18.

Utilizing Letter Frequency and Positioning

Understanding letter frequency in English can guide guess selection. Letters such as E, A, R, I, O, T, and N appear more frequently and are thus ideal candidates for early guesses.
